

Within the Jean Monnet project - Lifelong Learning Programme promoted by the European Commission, The Department of Social Sciences and Economics, University La Sapienza of Rome together with the European Observatory and the University for Europe are pleased to invite you to attend the first meeting of the series of seminars "EU Observer Connecting worlds to promote 'European Education Among universities, schools, and civil society Organizations".

Due to the economic deterioration in all European countries, the European governance had to be adapted to the new circumstances and it had been so far characterized by an architecture of binding budgetary policies for the Member States of the EU, through the establishment of a more rigid framework for the coordination and control of economic policies. The symposium will aim to outline the pillars of the new European governance model, analyzing the potential and risks for the member countries. The seminar aims to stimulate exchange of ideas about what solutions could adapt to current European issues and on what measures should be implemented to overcome the difficulties that still persist, without sacrificing the common desire to strengthen the Union.
